HERBS & SPICES

Herbs and spices were first discovered during the early Middle Ages. People learned to appreciate the flavor, and sometimes the color that spices could add to dishes. Many believe that herbs and spices have medicinal value and are still used as the basis for modern medicine.

The term "seasoning" has often been applied to both herbs and spices. Spices are obtained from certain fruits, seeds, roots, flower buds, and barks. They come from plants native to tropical climates and are known for their pungent flavor. Herbs, on the other hand, are green-leafed plants from temperate climates and are often grown in vegetable gardens.

There are no limits to the uses of herbs and spices. Herbs and spices can be a delicious substitute for salt, both before and after cooking. Because of this, we offer a varied selection of seasonings. It's all up to your personal tastes and preferences.
